From the President

Hi psych people,

Just getting a quick Freudian Slip out to you for the final run through until exams. Hope you are all being more productive than me!

The BIG news is that next Thursday we are holding a Trivia Night with the Engineering Society. More details below.

We have been pretty busy getting that one sorted out, so not a huge amount else planned beyond that!

Stay tuned for some BBQ's as the weather warms up, we will be sure to keep you in the loop!

Anything else we can do for you, then let me know.

EVIL MONKEY SAYS – COME TO THE TRIVIA NIGHT, IT WILL BE FUN!

Don't worry, he's not really evil, but he does know a good trivia night when he sees one!

Evil Monkey appears courtesy of Family Guy, screening on Pay TV and available on DVD - highly recommended

Website

Remember to check out the Psychology Society Website - http://clubs.anu.edu.au/clubs/psychology_society/ - we should be able to post some photos on it (hint hint) after next Thursday. Website enquiries should be directed to Chris Prosser at caprosser@hotmail.com

T-Shirts

The first of the ANU Psychology Society T-shirts will be appearing at the trivia night. Thanks for your feedback on the slogan (at least some of it was encouraging☺). The slogan for the first run of T-Shirts will be "ANU Psychology Society; It's like there's a party in my head and everyone's invited!" They will be a black t-shirt with white print, and will be available to order at the Trivia Night. Get behind your society and order one at the trivia night. Who knows, we might even give a few away☺

Freudian Slip of the Issue

Condoleezza Rice

A gaffe by national security adviser Condoleezza Rice during a cocktail party at the home of Times Washington bureau chief Philip Taubman in May 2004 had tongues wagging around the Beltway. In an uncharacteristically chatty moment, Rice remarked, "As I was telling my husband..." before correcting herself and continuing: "As I was telling President Bush..."

[Rice was single at the time.]
